

ABSTRACT

[0040] Methods for protecting an exposed copper surface of a partially fabricated IC from oxidation during exposure to an oxygen-containing environment are disclosed. The methods involve treating the exposed copper surface with a metallocene compound in order to minimize formation of copper oxide on the exposed surface, and exposing the copper surface to an oxygen-containing environment.